Nowadays, the English language is very developed, thousand of students are trying to study in foreign universities and many conditions and modern technologies are being created for this. On March 1, 2023, U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken visited a group of secondary school students learning English in U.S. Embassy Tashkent's newest English Access Microscholarship Program (Access). Launched at the Uzbekistan State World Languages University (UWL) in November 2022, the two-year Access program gives bright students from economically-disadvantaged families a foundation in English through after-school lessons and summer intensive sessions that boost their English and knowledge of the United States. Secretary Blinken met 12 students, ages 14-16, who demonstrated what they have learned about the U.S. holiday, President's Day, and their ability to answer questions about their favorite movies, foods, and hobbies. The Embassy supports 17 other Access programs across Uzbekistan reaching more than 700 students. The Secretary was met by Acting Rector Bakhrom Kulmatov, Vice Rector for International Cooperation Alisher Abidjanov, and Access Coordinator Gulnoza Radjabova, and joined a class run by Access teacher Viktoriya Rakhmanova and Fulbright English Teaching Assistant (ETA) Ashley Lane. Lane is one of 14 ETAs, recent U.S. college graduates who are assisting English teachers and sharing U.S. culture in university classrooms across Uzbekistan.

Secretary Blinken's visit to UWL illustrated one part of the U.S. Government's vast commitment to improving English teaching and learning in Uzbekistan. Since 2018, the U.S. Government has invested more than $25 million in English language teaching and learning in Uzbekistan in line with President Mirziyoyev's reform efforts to promote English learning and long-term economic growth. The funding pays for high-quality English textbooks that are now in 10,000 schools across the country; teacher training and professional development as part of the English Speaking Nation (ESN) program, which is employing U.S. English coaches to train 15,000 secondary school English teachers; and U.S. English Language educators who are embedded in classrooms to improve teaching and learning.

We know learning languages is not easy. We need hard work and patience.

Wrap yourself in English

You don't need to be in an English-speaking country for this. Just make English an integral part of your daily life. For example, write your diary (if you don't have one, I recommend keeping it, at least for language learning), notes, notes, and even your shopping list in English. Change the language of your phone to English, listen to English radio and podcasts. Hear something in English on your way to and from work or school.

Make friends who speak English

If there are English-speaking tourists in your area, speaking English with them often will make your language learning easier. If you do not have such an opportunity, then you can make friends through the Internet. For this, you can use social networks or special language learning websites and programs. "Hello Talk" application will find such friends for you. You can download the program from Google Play Store or App Store for IOS owners

Find a partner to learn a language with

It doesn't have to be English. If you have friends who are learning or want to learn a language, studying together with them will be very effective. In this way, you can help and encourage each other in learning the language. Create a speaking club and have frequent conversations in English.

set goals

Determine what your goal is for learning a language and work towards that goal. Want to get a better job? Do you want to study or travel abroad? Set short-term and of course long-term goals.

Use methods that are interesting for you when learning words

If you like to sing, look for new words in the lyrics of your favorite song. If you remember what you saw well, write new words on stickers and stick them all over your house. Make up old and funny sayings. You can also draw a small picture next to the words to make them easier to remember.

Explore culture.

Learning a language is not just about memorizing grammar and vocabulary. It is also being able to communicate with people who speak and think differently. By studying other cultures, your worldview will expand.

Whatever you do, enjoy what you do

Learning a language is hard work. But if you like what you're doing, you won't want to give up. Don't just learn a language. Play games, solve crosswords and puzzles, sing songs and read stories. The important thing is not to be afraid to make mistakes. Often the best way to learn is by making mistakes.

Don't be afraid to make mistakes

Your goal is to deliver a message, not speak perfect English, with the right grammar and vocabulary. Even native English speakers make mistakes!

Practice, practice, practice

Practice makes perfect. Constantly look for opportunities to test out your spoken English. Busuu's online English classes, for instance, are interactive, 45-minute group lessons, guided by a professional teacher. They are a great way to practice speaking English and learn faster in a fun, safe environment.

Listen

The more you hear, the easier it will be for you to speak better English. You'll start speaking more fluently and confidently in English conversations, learning how to give your opinions in English with new expressions and idioms.

Celebrate success

Every time you talk to someone in English is an achievement. Every single interaction you have, no matter how small, will help you improve your skills over time. Be proud of your progress.

Think in English

Go from speaking good English to great English by thinking in the language. You'll find it difficult at first, but after some time you'll learn how to switch between speaking English and your first language

Talk to yourself

It will look funny, but by talking to yourself in English in front of the mirror for each day, you'll learn to pronounce every letter in the English alphabet, plus when and how to use different expressions. You'll also learn where you make most of the mistakes. If you want to learn English, learning idioms and listening to many famous speakers is the most useful method, and many people use this method today. Adding idioms to your speech is the best way to speak

Television is the most informative (political, cultural, cognitive and educational). is one of the good media. Major in teaching foreign languages there are opportunities. In general, television is typical of human development is the form. The results of the study show that while listening to human speech 15% of information, while viewing - 25% of visual information, listening and at sight - remembers 65% of information. The use of television makes the English language more vivid and convincing the results to date show that each method is useful for high-level English language acquisition, and teachers working on their own are complementing these methods.

I concluded from this information that we are currently being given many conditions and opportunities, and it is up to us to use them. Being able to use the above methods in our learning and teaching is one of our greatest achievements in the future. If we use the methods and modern trends in learning, we will become the most mature staff.
