

THE STORY OF A MERCHANT WHO SAVED HIS BROTHER FROM DEATH*Shodiya Otanazarova A'zambek qiziUrgench State University,Student of the Faculty of Philology*

Annotation: There was a merchant in the land of Eden, who was the most skilled of merchants in trade and commerce. He had a good son, and there was no other boy in the world who could compare to him. The merchant's camel could not stop transporting goods, he traveled from one city to another every ten days. One night, the merchant left his sleep and went to make many trades. Before he had crossed any steppes and rivers, the caravan was attacked by robbers. All of them were afraid of the danger of death, and each of them ran away to the hills. While running away, nodding in the right direction, everyone went to different climates.

DISCUSSION AND RESULT

In this conflict, the merchant still saved his life, but he was separated from his son. This merchant, who was in a dark day, couldn't find his liver, and he was sighing from his heart. Heartbroken by this grief, he said to himself:

“Now my work is nothing but wandering, my body made of clay is completely exhausted and I run around like a rabbit until I get tired. If only I could find my beloved Kaaba in this run, what's the point of wandering through the desert?” he said.<sup>13</sup>

He had a thousand gold coins, which he had secretly tied around his waist, and when he saw that the savings were on his waist, he searched his liver. Instead of tears from his eyes, he constantly shed blood and ran everywhere in search of his beloved. It reached a wonderful end when the running and running crushed his liver and put him out of action. Having crossed many steppes, the poor man hastened his steps to look for this city as well. At a glance, there are quite a few in one place people are crowding, and in their hands is a prisoner of food. But this prisoner is brown and covered in his own blood, and above it is written swords shining and firing. It is said that blood libel was the cause of this man's current tragic situation, whose entire body has turned brown in blood. In order to get rid of this blood feud, they put a price of 1000 gold on him, but no one would dare to give him this money. When the exhausted merchant saw this sale, he took out his cash tied to his chest, gave him a thousand gold coins, and saved the poor oppressed. Then he looked and saw that it was his dear friend - his child. It was forgivable that he shed tears, but instead of tears, he shed blood from his eyes and washed away the blood that covered his son's body with blood. Then the wounds of his liver healed and he said:

- Oh my liver, tell me about your condition!

“When the situation you saw happened that night,” said his son, “I fell into the hands of the enemy”. At first, they all decided to kill me, then they decided to take my head and put a condition on me: “We will not kill you, but now you become friends with us, but whatever we do, remain our confidants”. they said. After they promised such a gift, I reluctantly submitted to their condition before death.

Today, they came to this country and fought with all the people. In this conflict, one of the people was martyred, and I became a prisoner of the people by the bandits. After they reported this situation to the governor, by his order, they handed me over to the heirs of the person killed by the bandits for food. You came when the sun of my life was about to set, you know what happened in this oil. You untied cabbage knots with your generous hands, gave me money and bought the cash of my soul.

When the people learned about this secret, they informed the king of the country about it. When the king, who was aware of the wisdom of kind generosity, understood the incident, he gave many gifts to the merchant and made him a wiser state than before did it. The merchant who gave away a thousand gold became a boy again and gained a hundred thousand happiness.

Wherever the cabbage rain falls, finally, such flowers will bloom there.<sup>14</sup>
